Fannie Lou Collins was born in Ohatchee, Calhoun County, Alabama on January 3, 1942 to the union of Bill and Beauty Collins. When her family moved to Gadsden, AL, she attended Carver High School.

On September 26, 1959, she was united in holy matrimony to the love of her life, Keith Lavon Miller. Their union was blessed with two children, Jeffrey Lavon and Mark Anthony Miller.

Some time later she began a diligent study of the Bible with Jehovah's Witnesses, after which she symbolized her dedication to the true God, Jehovah by water baptism in 1967. She thoroughly enjoyed sharing the good news of Jehovah's kingdom to all who would listen. She dearly loved her Christian associates; to name just a few, Annabell Anderson, Jean Avery, Betty Brooks, Myra Gantt, Shirley Provitt, Helen Thompson, Ellen Jackson. Later she adopted a new love in her life the Albertville-Gadsden Spanish congregation whose meetings she supported and attended along with her regular meetings at the North Gadsden Congregation of Jehovah's Witnesses. When she was unable to attend, she received her congregation meetings by means of the telephone hook up.
